Chapter 1 by A. K. Casterton

She watches from a distance, waiting for her next victim to let down their guard. She stalks them like a mountain lion stalks it's prey. Without any warning, she strikes and captures them in her web of deceit, and stares them in the eye and declares "I didn't do this, I swear"!

Chapter 2 by A. K. Casterton

Five Years Later

When I first met Nancy, she was flicking her cigarette ash on the waiting room floor outside my new office, "Good morning Nancy, how are you? I'm Dr. Mary Sava". I offered a hand shake; but she ignored it. "You can call me Mary", I told her.

"I'm pissed off, it's been five years since I started these fuckin therapy sessions", she said, as she took a drag off her cigarette, dropped it on the floor, and crushed it out with her foot. "These fuckin demons in my head are very much alive, they're getting louder and louder every day, it's just a matter of time".

"Just a matter of time for what?" I asked as I unlocked my office door, turned on the lights and followed her inside.

"Before they comes back" she snarled. "Fuck man didn't you read my file. what kind of shrink are you anyway?"
